An Introduction to hope (a self help for reluctant revolutionaries)

However well intended, the desperate doomsday approach adopted by a handful of concerned environmentalists, has only proven to backfire. The unforeseen side effect, of their apocalyptic warnings, is giving birth to an enormous monster of despair. This great beast is the embodiment of all hopelessness and fear. It is an epidemic of ignorance, a lack of information and poor leadership. The passionate activist can often be so fuelled with rage over the current unjust regime, that they are too blind to realize that not everyone feels the same way. Not everyone wants to become a revolutionary! Not everyone wants to be a dreaded shaman on some mountaintop somewhere eating nothing but brown rice.

The time has come to offer people choices, choices that exist today. We need to show people that the current system is unsustainable. We need to seamlessly integrate alternatives that will renew our plundered resources and help us move forward to our full potential. Many people today want convenience, comfort and efficiency (after all, this is what evolution is all about).

We are beautiful, highly intelligent creatures. We are capable of absorbing facts and processing information into knowledge. But what can we do with this great wealth of knowledge? Throughout civilization we have materialized this wealth into technologies and luxuries with infinite possibilities. We have made it possible to experiment with the human experience to the deepest method of our desires. However the question must be asked: how can we truly thrive, in a world where most knowledge is hidden from view or tainted with lies?

With the prophecy of a toxic future on the horizon (not to discredit just how far we currently are), many people feel it is already too late to change. We have slipped into a stagnant state of inaction.

The changes must come from both ends of society. It is up to the individual to accept the effects of their ecological footprint and put hope into action. It is time we held ourselves partially accountable. We all too quickly forget that we are the voters, the consumers and the workers, we are the machine. We are the ones who got ourselves into this mess and together we can get out.

However, as much as we can change ourselves we must demand the same changes from those we vote for, those we buy from and those we work for. There is no use in squandering precious time arguing about whether or not the ecocrisis is real, now is the time for unity.

We have divided our communities through race, age and class. We have isolated the young into rigid forms of learning that lack environmental education and creativity. We have segregated our elders into nursing homes (never to be heard from again). While they live in fear of a world that has changed so drastically in their lifetimes.

Young and old, both equally as important to our accumulation of knowledge (both equally taken for granted). Children are the innocent, untainted imaginations of the future. They will be left to pick up our pieces and clean up our mess. Our elders are the reminders of who we are and where we came from. They can show us where they went wrong and where we can do right.

So this is your chance.

They say that knowledge is the gaining and storing of information, and wisdom is the clarity to know what is important. We need to ask ourselves: what is important to us?

In order to not only survive, but also thrive and feel satisfied, we need to reassess our priorities. We need clean air, uncontaminated water, soil free of toxins, ecosystems that are intact, wildlife that is no longer in danger of extinction, communities that think globally and act locally, and a government that does not confuse capitalism for democracy. Ignorance can no longer be bliss. With so many resources at our fingertips, the opportunities for change beg for our attention. Knowledge truly is power. Action feeds on education. We must educate our children about nature. We must teach them the importance of respect and appreciation for this sacred planet. We must lead by example, showing them that the natural way is the only way.

In the endless battle for our rights, creativity and open-mindedness are key to protesting. Diversity is the spice of life, and can be the most effective tool for conquering this ecological crisis.

We all have a calling, and some will follow and others will lead. We all have something unique to offer. I offer you hope.

you have a right to live, not to continue living.

a so-called right to live would mean that if you are unable to purchase the privately produced fodder, you would still be supplied with nourishment equivalent to food. the drinking water would be cleaner and more reliable. the government would be responsible, but it's not going to happen.

and we all know how failing the government is with accountable responsibility.

you have to pay for your own fucking funeral. if there are no financial plans set by you or your kin, the tax dollars go toward putting your environmentally hazardous cadaver in an unmarked grave. the average funeral costs $5,000 or more and you're lucky to pay that little. wrapping you in the afterlife. well, your credit accounts, anyway.

EVERYTHING THAT IS NATURALLY ON THIS EARTH IS HERE FOR A REASON. OIL,
COAL, TREES. WE DIDN'T MAKE THEM. WHY WOULD WE? WE DON'T DON'T ANYONE. WONDER WHAT'S GOING TO HAPPEN? THERE'S NO BETWEEN THE OCEANIC PLATES AND THE EARTH CRUST. I DON'T SEE AND GOES TO ME. I CLOSE MY EYES AND IMAGINE A GIANT OVEN TAKING AWAY
EVERYTHING WE CAN PUT IN IT. SO THAT WE CAN TURN MORE INTO THE MONSTROSITY. I OPEN MY EYES AND SEE MILLIONS OF LITTLE OVENS, EACH BURNING A BASKET OF SOMETHING WE ARE A PART OF. IT IS SAID THAT THERE IS ENOUGH OIL UNDERNEATH ALASKA TO FEED AMERICA'S OIL CONSUMPTION RATES FOR 8 MONTHS. WHY WOULD YOU CREATE SOMETHING TO DESTROY WHAT WE WERE GIVEN IN THE FIRST PLACE? YOU REALIZED THAT YOU COULD MAKE MONEY OFF
BURNING A HOLE IN THE ONLY THING KEEPING WHAT WE LIVE AND BREATHE ON THIS PLANET. BETTER FIND MORE STUFF TO BURN. CAUSE I DON'T THINK WE'RE DYING FAST ENOUGH.

I'm a cotton-candy child raised by cartoon fantasies, fed through a pink plastic straw of deceit.
A covert movement, uprising what's left of an abandoned empire of decay built upon unstable pillars of tradition and ritualistic order, so logical in its architectural creation - it's simplistic term executional practice as witnessed through the sunflower eyes of creation. The sun in her head, that shines with unmistakable pride and is fronted by an unmistakable face, penetrating what controversy has moved into battle, for death. Seeking a simple explanation of forefather's wept soil and sea depths. Sowing the seed of negativity only to be defeated and buried once again beneath a layer of insecurity. Trapped within a forthcoming age of media, and syndicated among a succeeding chance of reluctant interpretations of corporate intrusion. The premeditated assault upon all paths of awareness, made present and open for attack through an internal acceptance that is processed within our own throne of purity, seeking the rightful intentions through mind-numbing paths of normalities loaning into sightful motions of of granted seclusions and misguided franchises. Empires built upon false ideologies, want confused for needs of the deeper self that stands upfront within the vessel we allow ourselves to be contained in. A herding movement, embracing the young, stirring a nocturnal voice, assessing the likelihood of seductive training. A message easily missed and see the reference inside our own vitally issued out controversies. A difference which we cannot consume, yet daily intakes our very soul, relentlessly consuming the essence of our essence until we are left tired, and weak.

SHITTING IN YOUR FRIDGE IS BAD FOR YOUR HEALTH

By Nameless

I was once PROUD to call myself Canadian, I once was proud to say we lived in a BEAUTIFUL nation. Where FREEDOMS were upheld. Where people can live long, HEALTHY lives. I once thought Canada was an Utopia, a nation where people lived in harmony with each other and nature. How sad I am now that I realize myself a BLIND optimist. I mean look around us, we have turned away from our potential and now sealed our fate along with America to be doomed to Ecological HELL. Every day I watch as we DESTROY our forests and rivers and in their place we build more homes, more factories and more cars. Do we not see that THIS IS KILLING US? Its like getting rid of your toilet and shitting in your fridge and your sink. YOU ARE NOW DRINKING AND EATING YOUR OWN SHIT. Every day I sit and I get fed this shit. I BREATHE the SHIT in the air from cars and trucks while I bike to work. I EAT this SHIT in my food and I DRINK and bathe in the SHIT as it pours from my faucets. We are selling our environment for money. Its funny how we feel money is the answer to everything. I mean it's a piece of paper with a number drawn on it to make us think its worth something. But what is it really worth? Its just PAPER after all, and paper as we know comes from trees. PAPER money buys FOOD, it buys WATER and sooner or later well use it to buy AIR. Hmmm, FOOD, WATER and AIR, do we not need these to LIVE?. When will we learn that money isnt going to SAVE US.

WE CANNOT PAY THE WATER TO SUSTAIN US
WE CANNOT PAY THE LAND TO FEED US
WE CANNOT PAY THE AIR TO STAY CLEAN

Our governments have the DUTY and OBLIGATION to CARE for the HEALTH and well being of EVERY CITIZEN. They are supposed to GUARANTEE OUR SURVIVAL and protect us from harm, in exchange we give them our taxes so they can implement plans and safeguards. It seems lately the only thing they have been implementing is cuts to education, health and environment and giving themselves pay raises, they are taking away what we need to survive and instead they are stealing our money and destroying our nation. The government has proven itself unwilling and unable to protect our nation. That is why we cannot depend on governments or other agencies TO SAVE US, WE MUST SAVE OURSELVES. As protest for the Governments failure I urge all of us to stop paying our taxes and instead directly give the same amount of our wages (roughly 17%) directly to healthcare, environmental organizations and other groups who are doing all in their power to protect life on this planet. We can no longer afford to make any mistakes. We all have a right to live... a right we were given the day we were born and took our first breathe of polluted air.

FACTS

● 50 to 100 species of plants and animals go extinct every day ● There are approximately 75,000 synthetic chemicals in the world, of which fewer than 1,000 have been subjected to proper toxicology tests. The way the system works, a chemical is assumed innocent until proven guilty (which works to the benefit of the big corporations). ● 100 acres of tropical rainforest is destroyed every minute ● The explosive increase in human population is adding a quarter of a million daily. ● BP and Shell are the top two oil companies looking for alternative energy resources, while Chevron/Texaco, Occidental Mobil and other big oil corps. have still not accepted that climate change is a reality. ● Mexico City is the most populous urban area on earth, two million people lived there in 1940, today more than 20 million people live work and bear their children in the most poisonous air on the planet, the pollution is so bad that many environmentalists claim the city could become uninhabitable in the next decade. ● The National Institute of public health concluded that every 4th disability and every 17th death is caused by air pollution. ● 2.4 billion pounds of toxic chemicals are released into the air each year by chemical manufacturing plants and other industrial sources, that's 320 chemicals 60 of which are known to cause cancer. ● already the US government has given its approval to begin gene therapy, the deliberate introduction of DNA to alter genetic makeup of children.

Look around, where are we? Break the gap of lost trust, and unravell the sanctity which we're so liberated by. Using high end ways, by means of war, engagement, and suffering. Stretched to limits where we've ensued many, if not all problems, which are now attached to government away. A world left dark, and destroyed. Nations crumbling under shadows of poisoning, violence. A systematic flush of fossil fuels, or natural resources, all in the name of evolution? No. Of conquering and domination. There, rests upon our backs, the slavery which many under privileged children and families, are struggling to survive. Working twelve hour days, under the influence of a greater future, for the world. With little or no return to their needs. Breached inside their lives by poverty and "love". For the sake of the world, we twisted, bent, retained, and twisted crowds with care. living thousands maintain their peaceful minds by

When colonization first was started, Columbus created a tendency towards Native Americans, due to their civilized culture. when his travelling was only under the eyes of God, just the same as the European attitude at the time. When he arrived, he submitted to his God, and his understanding with discovery; realizing shortly, that their god was not the same, and that they didn't understand what God truly was until they understood his God. This explaining their slow acceptance of evolution. Their God, was not all that was needed for true god, for pure satisfaction. Lies left untold through

The Bible. The Quran.. Buddha and every type of understanding that there was throughout mankind is only been possible due to religious beliefs. countries, with a higher learning capacity, do not connect them, but rather, see the development of the modernized countries affliction into religion and belief. All in the eye of the greater good.

I ask, if a man believes in a 'secular' idol, does it mean his beliefs are wrong, because the culture he acts upon? Or is it just a routine that man has created to allow for his praise to reach his god? If that be so, does that imply that his religion is more correct... Or that his life is his destiny, that his actions and his kindness are measures of the reflection of God in his life? Look around to see the decay of a million in a midst of trees and fog, facing the Why then, I say, does this interrupt the speed or evolution in our history?

War. Simply put, dispute through different incentives of different views, through different eyes, to continue as a species. We're punishing ourselves. We're flogging the wretched souls, and adding pressure amongst the crippled and so as we look around, we see the corruption of nature's resources deposited inside our atmosphere, we see the pollution breaking apart our sturdy ground. When we look around we see the abolished earth, one which we obviously don't need... in the name of science, of evolution? When you drive down a highway and see a thousand thrown pieces of junk, of garbage, of pollution, you start to think how far we've broken apart what we have left of this dying nations, with lost cause. Can I then ask, how much power would be there to create a God to save the lives of the dying, the weak, and the malnourished? This is not the case. For God has no place inside politics, except for the mere away of voting power.

I'd like to cease this attack for retribution, and look upon the rest of science, for science and religion are not intact. Except the low recognition of life when the Renaissance began, the destruction of the knowledge came to a phase, and rising was seen through the pope's eye, and we had started a new wave of learning, under the scope of "boldy going where no man has gone before". The stars. The earth. The world. As 100 years later, and we are now seeing that the basic understanding of science are solely a reaction of chemicals and understanding, that we are in danger of the basic functions, through living and chemical movements inside each of us. To a child, their automatic function would say what they see, is what they are. To a scientist, their search never ends.

These two are far from together, for one is the realm of faith, while the other is the realm of science. Of faith and the scientific bridge that connects. Why then are these two ever partially together? Inside this fragmented letter upon the government's actions? These two simply put, are running into a an era, where science is allowing even science - to determine that the operation of the chemical realm is yet another understanding of God. I say that deliberately, due to the illusions that are perpetuated when understanding that everything we see is yet another chemical reaction of the molecules vibrating in and out of view. What is God then? Is God not just a man in the skies you can't break the constant ceiling and you're working to your problems, your anxiety, and your worries? Is he not just a man, bigger than yourself, a rock to lean against in your time of need, a man to hold your head up high, and to love, and feel loved? Why are we so unable to achieve this on our own? Why can we not understand that love is yet another chemical reaction inside the mind?

The problem is not religion, nor is it science, but more the first sin we create... and thus on an eternal spiral falling from it. From the first understanding of who we truly are. We have abolished the understanding of faith, and replaced it with politics. We have desecrated the name of God, and left it to die with those who rather look it out. Science is the new strive, no longer is evolution/creationism under the name of God, but rather under the name of science. Politics are used to make what is necessary to control the mass herd of lost souls, to govern the people, and direct us into our future. Our future being science. I find it hardly funny when we start learning the endless possibilities of science, that we are following a herd of leaders, governed by the needs of the earth. Seriously, look around, and think to yourself, With our drastic population, with our overall world wide population.. Can we all make a difference, do we seriously have enough time to change the way the earth is turning?

All in the name of prosperity, of advancement, of growth. We rather destroy part of the cosmos in order to become closer to god, higher beings. It is a rat race we are in, running from the past, and running to our undesirable future, resurrected hope or diminished faith. Again, who are we? where do we come from? and where are we going? And does time have a say?

Here's to you Billy Murphy, a true Canadian hero. Thank you for your fabulously astute observations back in the 1970's. Because of them, our marijuana laws are as accurate and perfect today as they are. I mean, without your wonderful research regarding the harmfulness of marijuana, we would be far less educated about the problem. You had the guts to step up, and look into such a terrible violation of society, at such a crucial time in history. And I feel you are eternally grateful. Here is just one of your more memorable and life-influencing statements:

"The [marijuana] addict loses all sense of moral responsibility. Addicts to this drug, while under the influence, are immune to pain, and could be severely injured without having any realization of their condition. While in this condition they become very [sic] saving matters and are liable to kill or indulge in any form of violence to other persons, using the most savage methods of cruelty without, as said before, any sense of moral responsibility." And add to mention the expert opinion you received from the Chief of Police out in Los Angeles - where we all know their vast knowledge on the subject - Charles A. Jones, which reads as follows:

"Heroin, or Indian hemp, grows wild in Mexico but to raise this shrub in California constitutes a violation of the State Narcotic Law, he says. 'Persons using this narcotic, make the dried leaves of the plant, which has the effect of driving them completely insane. The addict loses all sense of moral responsibility. Addicts to this drug, while under its influence, are immune to pain, and could be severely injured without having any realization of their condition. While in this condition they become saving matters and are liable to kill or indulge in any form of violence to other persons, using the most savage methods of cruelty without, as said before, any sense of moral responsibility.'"

It's a wonder more people didn't step up, such as yourself, to proclaim the harmlessness of this affliction and the vast implications via use may have on regular, unsuspecting citizens. To think, that this drug may have been legal, and allowed to be distributed widespread amongst whoever took ill. However, with these sort of side effects it's a wonder anyone would choose to partake in such a toxin. And then you go on to say:

"It has been pointed out that there are three ways out from the agony of this addiction: let -- Denial, and -- Death, and -- Abandonment. This is assuredly a direful trinity and one with which the public should be acquainted in order that they may be warned of the sharp danger that lies in even casually tasting poisons which have been justified, or which are habit-forming."

Once again, how can the people of this great nation possibly thank you enough? You going above and beyond the call of duty to ensure that the citizens of this great nation do not succumb to death, insanity, or abandonment? It's a true shame that your name did not appear among the greatest Canadians of all time. So, according to you, you have saved countless lives from being ruined by this poison we know as marijuana. May your name never get dragged through the dirt. In the next time you spend a fifty dollar bill on dope, think of Billy Murphy, who's picture was printed on the side.

"Despite the recent revisions, many of Mrs. Murphy's original proposals are still reflected in our present narcotic legislation...of equal importance was Mrs. Murphy's impact on the public's perception of drug use and users. Although her more outrageous claims have been dismissed, many of her extreme assumptions are still accepted by segments of the Canadian public.

"The public's profound ignorance for drug use and the lack of objective information enhanced her apparent expertise. Her writings were extremely influential in shaping Canadian drug laws which underwent significant changes in the 1970's."
